

I find the shortwave bands are noisier than ever currently. I am a ham operator (kd7bcw), and find that we will sell-out to any corporation, etc. that can afford the lobbyists. There is NO need to allow the destruction, of the ham (shortwave spectrum) for greed.

The noise that such BPL modems will radiate in the bands will kill communications and highly increase noise. Common sense, if not an understanding in basic radio principles should prevail over corporate commercial take-overs of the long ago given ham bands currently used , and the possible future frequency allocations.

Ben Gardner